

ABSTRACT

A medical diagnostic testing device is provided with a voice message capability to record one or more voice messages associated with a test result. When a stored test result is retrieved and displayed, the medical diagnostic testing device also plays the one or 5 more recorded voice messages associated with the stored test result.